Coincides with Career-Spanning Retrospective at The MCA Chicago

CHICAGO – In partnership with Chicago's Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events (DCASE), Art on theMART, the largest permanent digital art projection in the world displayed across the 2.5-acre river-façade of theMART in Chicago, today announced a new projection by acclaimed American artist Nick Cave as part of its Summer 2022 programming that will be shown twice nightly from May 5 through September 7, 2022. Entitled Ba Boom Boom Pa Pop Pop, this new video work, made specifically for Art on theMART, features completely original footage together with remastered content from Cave's original film Drive-By (2011). The work makes use of theMART's unique location and the building's status as an iconic Chicago landmark, and will coincide with his first career- spanning retrospective, Forothermore, at the Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago, on view from May 14 through October 22, 2022

For almost three decades, internationally renowned, Chicago-based artist Nick Cave (b. 1959) has been working at the intersection of sculpture, installation, sound, performance and film to address pressing societal issues related to race, gender, sexuality and class. As an activist, educator and community-builder, Cave often activates and engages the public sphere as part of his artistic practice.

Cave is perhaps best known for his Soundsuits, colorful and exuberant sculptural body suits comprised of synthetic hair and raffia, initially created in direct response to the brutal police beating of Rodney King in 1991. Camouflaging the body, Cave's Soundsuits mask the wearer's identity, creating a 'second skin' which transcends boundaries of race, class and gender—forcing the viewer to look beyond preconceived notions and internal biases.

Bridging dance, performance, film and public art, Ba Boom Boom Pa Pop Pop features Cave's iconic Soundsuits in motion. Brightly colored figures will dance across theMART's iconic riverside façade, transporting the viewer to a kaleidoscopic otherworld on the river's edge. Amidst the flurry of movement, a figure adorned with a stop-sign emerges, reminding viewers of the underlying sense of urgency despite the jubilant expression of freedom.

Contextualizing his new video projection, Cave states, "Chicago is a living representation of America as a melting pot. My hope is that by turning our collective gaze up to theMART's monumental facade and taking in the Soundsuits in all their limitless exuberance, we can let some of that positivity seep into our own skins."

"We are honored to collaborate with the singular Nick Cave whose work wonderfully complements our mission" said Cynthia Noble, executive director of Art on theMART. "His artistic practice has always focused on themes of accessibility and building community—going beyond the gallery walls and bringing important topics into public space. In these new projections, Cave has the ability to do just that while reaching a larger, more diverse audience."
